The Free Press of to-day says: "The Regina Leader's announcement that the contract for the Long Lake road has been let to Ross & Ouellette cannot be reliable, as an agent just here from England to raise money for the construction of the road; although there are strong probabilities that the road will be pushed ahead this year as soon as at Saskatoon. Still nothing can be done until the bonds have been floated in the Old Country."

FRANK OLIVER, proprietor.

EDMONTON BULLETIN, JULY 6, 1889.

Wm. O'Connor, champion oarsman of America, left Toronto on June 24th for England where he will row Scullie of Australia for the championship of the world.

The Manitoba crop bulletin, under the head of "labor and wages" says that in some townships no farm laborers "are employed and none are likely to be employed, the farmers getting through by exchanging work with each other." This shows the advantage of those settlements.

During three months working last year of the alluvial gold deposits of Daylesford, Victoria, Australia, about 33,500 lbs of gravel were treated and gave an average yield of 1 1/2 grains of gold to each ton of gravel, which was not very profitable, owing to the use of improved machinery.

A Balgonie correspondent of the Regina Journal says: "A great drawback will be felt on account of the C. P. R. company not granting any permits this season. Farmers are at a loss to know how and when to go to be had." There is lots of it in Northern Alberta. People who want to raise cattle should locate in a country where food for cattle is abundant.

Lumsden, the civil engineer, who was sent out to examine the country between Regina and Prince Albert in the interests of English capitalists who have been asked to advance money to construct the Regina & Long Lake railway has returned. He speaks favorably of the country and says the capitalists will probably be influenced in their action by his report.

The Sun of June 19th says: Some few showers have fallen somewhat irregularly within the last week, but unless we have a considerable change within the next ten days the Red River valley and adjoining districts must make only a moderate return for this season. Further west the prospects improve and grain has a very healthy color. Garden truck is suffering very severely, and a good deal of seed has not vegetated at all. Pastures are getting very dry also. With favoring rains the later sown grains may still make a good yield, both in quantity and quality.

This land formerly owned by the Bell farming company is now being offered for sale at $8 to $15 an acre. The land comprised in this farm was occupied by intending homesteaders in 1882. These men were harassed and finally driven off by the Canadian government to give room for the Bell company. That company sunk a good many thousands of capitalists money by bad management and finally had to give up. Now the land is being held at figures which practically prohibit occupation. In this little history is contained some of the reasons why the Northwest is not better settled at the present time.

The Toronto World, upon which appears to have devolved the task of fighting railway extension in the Northwest, bases its chief objection to the N. P. & M. securing the land grant of the Northwest Central, on the danger of allowing a foreign company to secure control of so much Canadian land as the Northwest Central has been granted. Just where the danger comes in the World does not point out, neither does it speak of the alternative danger of keeping the best part of the Northwest without railway communication. In fact, if this alien control of Canadian lands is a danger, and is the only danger to be feared from the proposed N. P. & M. extension it can most easily be avoided. The company that would take the land grant, if it only wants it for it may sell it, that it may get money for it to assist in building and running the road and at the same time get settlers on it whose labor will in time furnish traffic for the road. No doubt the company would be only too glad to accept a reasonable cash bonus from the government, as in Manitoba, in place of the land grant, allowing the government to realize the amount out of the lands while securing their settlement. This would secure the necessary railway extension in the Northwest, would keep lands away from foreign control, and should not cost the country any more than the giving of the land direct to the company would. The World does not advocate this proposition or like one, because it is feasible, and the World's head is as well as that of the government which it is paid so well to support, is apparently to prevent, not to assist, railway extension in the Territories.

"WHERE ARE THE IMMIGRANTS?"

The Montreal Star, which gives an independent support to the Ottawa government in a recent issue makes the following important enquiries regarding the Northwest under the above heading:

"What has the Northwest cost Canada? Rather what has it not cost Canada? Add the millions in money, lands and railways to aid the construction of the Canadian Pacific railway to the millions for land surveys, mounted police, Indians, territorial government and the relief of the poor and the total seems large enough. It is, in fact, enormous, but the country is worth all it cost. That is to say, it will be worth it when settled and cultivated. Up to the present moment the settlement of the Northwest is not a success. Outside of the cities there is not in the entire Northwest as many people as you will find in an ordinary county in Ontario and Quebec, and including the cities there are not in all those thousands of miles of territory as many people as are to be found in Montreal. We have been in possession of the country nearly twenty years, and while we may be fairly well supplied with such commodities as Winnipeg and Brandon and Regina and Calgary and Port Arthur, we should remember that twenty years of energy, so large an expenditure of money, means as much as one hundred years in the olden time. Canada has staked a great deal on the purchase and development of the Northwest and it must be admitted that the extent of the population of that country is to-day very far from as great as the requirements and its vast expenditure would be. We do not take much stock in the partisan charges of misgovernment; we hold it would be impossible to govern so large an extent of country from Ottawa, without some degree of blundering. At the same time it is only right that we should seriously consider why it is that with the remarkable advantages which the Canadian Northwest has to offer to the landless and the industrious, enterprising settler, so few people have made their homes there. The parliament or the government that will fill up the Northwest will do a great thing for Eastern Canada. A million of people on those western prairies will help materially to bear the burdens of our annual expenditure. A million of northwestern consumers of eastern manufactures—the Northwest can never be a manufacturing country, outside of meat canning, flour grinding, etc.—would benefit every manufacturing industry from St. Catharines to Halifax. How small a fraction of a million we have in the Northwest we all know, yet hundreds of thousands are pouring every year into states and territories south of the line, offering no such attractions to the settler as our Northwest possesses. It is time we understood the cause of all this and why the richest soil and the healthiest climate in the world are avoided. The cities of Eastern Canada, the capitalists and the workmen of the old provinces, the taxpayers from end to end of the Dominion who have not grudging the enormous outlay which they hoped would give them a million of fellow subjects in the Northwest by 1889, are all alike interested in learning why their hopes have not been realized and what is to be done to secure settlers for the Northwest lands. This is a practical question, one of the greatest moment to all Canadians and far transcending the petty squabbles in which political partisans are prone to engage. The columns of the Star are open to those who have information to offer or remedies to suggest."

The question asked by the Star has not been asked any too soon nor can it be answered too quickly. Its importance cannot be exaggerated. And still only one side of the matter has been touched by the Star. While Manitoba and the Northwest to-day contain less than 150,000 Canadians the United States has gained from the population of Canada in the 20 years past during which the Northwest has formed part of this country at least an equal number, if not two or three times as many. It is not that the Northwest is going slowly because some other part of our country is being built up, but because a rival country is being built up at Canada's expense, that makes the question so pressing. Although the question is important it is not necessarily puzzling. Had it been asked long ago, it could have been answered long ago. But the people of the east were not in a humor to ask the question. They looked upon the Northwest as a dependency rather than as a part of Canada. Some of them saw a place out of which money could be made for themselves and friends and others as a place which was simply a bill of expense and a loss to the country. It must be quite within the recollection of the Star that it is not many years since leading papers in Eastern Canada held the belief that a settler transferred from the East to the Northwest was so much lost to the former. Even yet there are very few who understand the relation between the west and east to be as stated by the Star. That is that "A million of people on those Northwestern prairies will help materially to bear the burdens of our national expenditure. A million of northwestern consumers of eastern manufactures would benefit every manufacturing industry from St. Catharines to Halifax." When the majority of the people of the east who govern the administration of the affairs of the country and to prevent their Northwestern affairs will be administered in such a way as to bring about the desired result, as it might have been brought about years ago had such an understanding been reached.

To answer the Star's question directly and in as few words as possible: It must be evident that to secure rapid settlement of the country there must be cheap land and cheap and abundant railway communication. The land policy that has been pursued at least since 1881 has been to reserve absolutely from settlement at least half of the land, and until the monopoly clause was done away with, to absolutely prevent railway extension into the more fertile parts of the country and to prevent the railways from doing such a policy the country could not settle rapidly and did not, nor will it until there is substituted for it a policy of free land and railway extension.

A FROST THEORY.

Notes to accompany a preliminary map of the Duck and Riding mountains in North-western Manitoba by J. B. Tyrrell, B. A., F. G. S., field geologist of the geological and natural history survey of Canada, published by authority of parliament by Dawson, Bros., Montreal, price 10 cents, was received by last mail. Mr. Tyrrell who explored Northern Alberta in 1886 spent the summer of 1887 in exploring the country around Lake Dauphin between the Riding and Duck mountains and Lakes Manitoba and Winnipegosis as well as the mountains themselves. Mr. Tyrrell speaks most favorably of the whole of the district mentioned which is altogether or partly wooded, but particularly of the Lake Dauphin district where the soil is especially fertile and free from summer frosts. On the 2nd of August 1887 barley was ripe and was being cut on the 17th dead ripe wheat was being cut. The following extract from his work in giving a theory regarding summer frosts, is well worthy of careful attention. "The summer frosts, too, which have occasionally proved prejudicial to the crops in some parts of Manitoba and the Northwest Territory, appear to avoid this favored district. This is, no doubt, in part due to the slope of the surface, the cold draining down the gentle incline till it reaches the lake, where it is warmed by radiation from the surface of the large body of water which has been warmed by the hot sun of the day before. The surface of the lake, moreover, gives out its heat rapidly to the overlying air. The great luxuriance of the grasses and herbage in this district has also much effect in hindering the occurrence of summer frosts. By increasing the amount of water evaporated in the day time it renders latent a great deal of heat, which again becomes available when this moisture is deposited in the evening in the form of dew. Growing grain would also have precisely the same effect. Its sheltered position is also very much in its favor. A wind blowing from the east across the great lakes of the Winnipeg basin will be loaded with moisture, which, if it does not fall as rain, will form into clouds or be deposited as a heavy dew, and will avert a frost either by hindering the radiation of the heat from the lower stratum of air, or by raising its temperature. If the wind is blowing from the drier plains to the west it will be partly directed to the southwest along the Duck and Riding mountains, and what crosses the mountains, though very dry, will be so much warmed by condensation in descending thirteen to eighteen hundred feet that little danger of frost need be feared from it. In this connection, it may be remarked that it appears very probable that the planting of trees around the fields on the plains of Manitoba and the Northwest Territory would have considerable influence in preventing the occurrence of summer frosts by breaking the winds and hindering the free circulation of air. The moisture that was evaporated from a field of growing or ripening grain or other crop would then, to a considerable extent, remain over the field, whereas now it is often replaced by dry air from the plains, which offers no obstruction to the rapid loss of heat from the earth by radiation. The circumstances under which frost occurs are often as follows:—During the day a stiff wind is blowing from a westerly direction, carrying off the moisture as fast as it is evaporated. In the evening the weather becomes very calm, and on account of the absence of any oncoming air the atmosphere of the stars shine with exceptional brilliancy. The earth is warm from the heat of the day, but radiation proceeds so fast that by one or two o'clock in the morning its immediately available supply of heat is exhausted and the overlying air falls below the freezing point. The presence of a greater amount of moisture in the air will prevent this rapid dissipation of heat, and one of the means of insuring the presence of this moisture is by constructing wind-breaks in the form of rows of trees in order to retain the damp atmosphere over the fields rather than to allow it to be replaced by the drier air of the plains. Smudges, the smoke from which on those quiet, bright nights will settle down over the land, would doubtless also have a very beneficial effect in hindering the occurrence of frosts. The breaking up and tilling of the soil will also have a great effect in reducing the diurnal variations of temperature. The direct rays of the sun do not raise the temperature of plowed land so high as that of an unbroken plain, but they warm it to a greater depth, a fact which may readily be observed in walking across the fields on a hot day in summer. The dry sod, covered with short withered grass, will be felt to be very hot, but if ploughed and is reached, the ground will at once be found to be much cooler. By taking a spadeful of earth from two places the lower part below the sod will be found to be very much cooler than that under the ploughed land. The effect that this will have on the night temperature of the air will be that the radiation of heat from the ploughed land will be much slower than from that which is unbroken, but which is practically bare on account of the withering of the short grass. The temperature will be lowered comparatively slowly, and while in the latter case a frost might have set in at four or five o'clock in the morning, in the former the air will be kept above freezing point till the sun rises again."

CRICKET.
The cricket match on July 1st between Edmonton and Clover Bar commenced at 9 o'clock and finished at 12:15. The result was an easy victory for Edmonton. A. Pattison rolled up a fine score of 52, almost half of the total made by his side, thus getting the best individual score to date this year. In fielding and bowling the visitors outplayed their opponents, but in batting they were far behind. In justice to them it must be mentioned that they have had no practice this year.
